A PROMISING OUTLOOK.

A new year never opened more auspiciously for any city than does 1916 for Grants Pass. There is no Stanbrough. adjustment of business conditions necessary because of the becoming effective of the prohibition law, municipal affairs are in a satisfactory shape, and industrially there could be little else to be asked for at the present time than the good things that are assured. The railroad has passed the stage where doubt entered into its future, and the details for its continued construction are progressing as rapidly as engineering skill can outline it. There seems little doubt in the minds of those best informed concerning an opportunity to be given before the end of another summer to celebrate the advent of the railroad to the mines of the Illinois valley. The sugar factory is also practically assured to the valley, and Grants Pass is making a strong campaign for its location here, day as the toll of a terrific winddecided by the builders of the enter- environs overnight. prise.
